

18. My Wedding Day

Here comes the BRIDE

And then I met you, and slowly all at once my whole world began to change.

Your wedding day is one of those days that is probably on your list of the Best Days Ever and one of the most significant in your life when looking back. Talk to anyone and most will agree, the day just flies by. Before you know it you are cutting the cake. After the crying, the dancing, all the smiling til your face hurts, the love and support of your friends - its then over.

Did everything go to plan? Did you feel any different, Was the most magical part of the day the one you thought it would be?

This page prompt could take up a whole album but as this project is just a glimpse of your life - we are just doing one. However you are more than welcome to add additional pages afterwards - as your wedding day is really the beginning of a whole new chapter in your life.

An idea would be to use this page prompt to record the most memorable part of your day, whether that is walking down the aisle, cutting the cake, family photos or simply sealing the deal (You may now kiss the bride!) - It's entirely up to you.

Try and choose papers that coordinate with the colours you chose for your wedding day - so that its all coordinated, especially if you think you might add additional pages later on.

Even include some little embellishments if you have any from your special day or things that remind you to make it more personal.

JOURNAL: Create a card from cardstock to matte your photo onto and use that to journal inside about those magical moments in the day that you loved. As this may be personal and not wish to share with everyone - it will be hidden. However those words will mean alot to future generations and those who you allow to go through your album.

Love, friendship, encouragement and support. From this day forward - Our wedding day sealed the deal for me to have my best friend by my side to share and make many of our dreams into a reality. And who knows what adventures the future will bring.
